

Arthur Wu, MD Biography

Dr. Arthur Wu is a native of Los Angeles. He attended Stanford University for undergraduate studies, and he received his medical degree from Duke University. He completed residency training in Otolaryngology at UCLA, and he pursued a fellowship in Rhinology at Harvard – Massachusetts Eye & Ear Infirmary. He has been at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center since 2011 where he is currently an Associate Professor and acts as Co-Director of the Sinus Center. He is active in clinical outcomes research as well as heading an internally funded translational research program in immunology and chronic rhinosinusitis.